To whom it may concern:

I really think that it's time for you folks to settle this issue. We've forgotten what the issue was anyway so now you all look like even bigger money wasting fools. As a consumer, I was never convinced that this was ever anything more than a money grab by certain influential individuals who were unable to design and produce software that anyone wanted. Have you noticed that nothing really new has been produced lately? Let the market take care of itself and quit trying to protect your special interests under the guise of "protecting the public from the big bad corporation". Enough is enough!

Sincerely,

Dennis T. Battrick
